Greenville, Ky., Sept. 8. During a dispute between Rex Millard Ward, a Baptist minister, and Marshall Bus, of Argillite, Wednesday morning, the two became engaged in a fight which ended in Ward striking Bus in the head with a rock which resulted in the latter's death, late Wednesday evening. The unfortunate man was 72 years of age, was married and the father of two children.

Two men had been pushing together on the Kentucky side of the Big River near Linton, apparently great friends, when one of them was found dead, shot down through the forehead the wounds being close together. The dead man's pockets were full of the hot lead and his roommates and the father of the latter had fled to their neighbors. They were all natives of North Carolina. It is said that one of the fugitives is known.

One of the most disastrous wrecks that has occurred on the Chesapeake and Ohio road since the recent wreck at Loudonville, last spring took place at Graves Shoals about six miles west of Greenville.

An extra freight going east was derailed at that point and about the freight train went into the ditch. The wreckage took time and hours having been no pale water, and one near it had his life claimed by the entire train.

Harlan, Ky., Sept. 10. In a pitched battle on Walling creek, to which there were no witnesses except the man who survived, Stephen Ledford and James Unthank were killed. The coroner's jury accused Thomas Noe Jr., of being the slayer of the men, and he is under arrest. The three men had been to the postoffice together and left there laughing and talking, and no one knows how they got into the fight or who did the shooting except that Noe was with them and the other two are dead. Ledford had eight bullets in his body, but whether Unthank or Noe fired them is not known.

Thomas Doran, 28, fireman at the Crystal Ice plant in Ironton met his death in the Ohio river at Russell late Sunday night, and the affair is shrouded by mystery, it being questionable whether it was an accident or that Doran was a victim of foul play.

The house boat, Rambler, from which Doran either fell or was thrown into the river, and which was understood to be property of Moody Eakins, a former Ironton se-

The Printing Point

Good typewritten letters convey an impression of good business methods, and the machine is often responsible for the appearance.

The UNDERWOOD

types always reach the proper printing point. The type-bar operates through—or with—a guide—a feature peculiar to the UNDERWOOD. The type MUST go right. There's no other way. It cannot wobble. Good looking work is assured and the UNDERWOOD features prevent operator's blunders.

The simple mechanism which secures perfect work in the Underwood is a mighty interesting exhibit of ingenuity and skill. Why not come look at it? Knowledge of the Underwood will help you to secure greater efficiency. It will be a pleasure to help you to just as much knowledge of the Underwood Standard Typewriter as YOU choose to acquire.

look keeper, and a similar boat with out a name, which is alleged to have been the property of the Gilmore bank, whose name have become so familiar to the reading public of Ironton and which boats have been found near Russell are no more.

What there was of them and the Kentucky night riders paid the boats a visit Monday morning shortly after midnight and soon the midnight darkness was illumined by two flaming boats one of which the Gilmore boat, burned to the water's edge anchored to the shore, while the Rambler rammed down the Ohio a mass of flame presenting a sight that was beautiful to behold and never to be forgotten as it floated slowly around the bend the flames shooting high into the air and casting a bright light upon the water from shore to shore.

Huntington, W. Va., has sustained a severe loss in the death of George P. Miller, one of the great and most progressive business men in that bustling city. He was probably the most prominent man there in the successful promotion of enterprises. He was 62 years old and died very suddenly of apoplexy. His death is attributed primarily to overwork.

Monday evening a bad accident occurred in the railroad yards on East Front avenue, Ashland, in which Mrs. Elsie, wife of ex-Prefectman Lee there, was fatally injured under the wheels of a train. She now lies at the King's Daughters' hospital with both lower limbs crushed just above the ankle and there is but slight hope of saving either foot.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. left their home about 7 o'clock to go to their car on the river bank beyond the railroad yards to get some vegetables. A long string of box and flat cars, each of three trucks, in length at that time blocked their way. They waited for a minute or two but hearing nothing of an engine and seeing no hands to help, they that any train was about and Mr. and Mrs. Elsie decided to cross the train.

Mr. Elsie swung up between two cars at a point midway between 29th and 30th streets while Mrs. Elsie crawled under the car but as Mr. Elsie jumped to the ground on the opposite side of the track, an engine leaped into the string of cars, some two blocks distant and made a coupling. At this instant Mrs. Elsie cried out, and her husband grabbed her by the shoulders and pulled her out from under the wheels, when she told him that her limbs were severed.

Have You Tried It?

There is a bottle of Cardui waiting for you at the drug store. Have you tried it? If not, we urge you to do so, before your troubles have obtained such a hold on you, that nothing will drive them out.

Even now, it may be nearly too late. But try it anyhow. If anything can help you, Cardui will. It has helped in thousands of cases, where other medicines had been tried in vain. Why should it not do the same for you?

Take CARDUI
The Woman's Tonic

"My daughter, Octavia, would have been in her grave today, had it not been for that fine medicine, Cardui," writes Mrs. Laura Lawrence, of Drennon Springs, Ky.

"Nothing I tried helped my daughter, until she had taken Cardui. I had sent for the doctor, when I thought of your medicine and got a $1 bottle. When she had taken four doses she became all right. I often recommend Cardui to my friends."

Your druggist sells Cardui with full instructions for use on the bottle.
